Professor and former senator Paul Simon visits Edwardsville campus on behalf of student leadership

■ BY REBECCA HOPKINS
EDITOR IN CHIEF

Former senator (and now Professor at SIUC) Paul Simon came to SIUE on Tuesday to deliver a talk about leadership for the Student Leadership Development Program (SLDP). Before he went to the podium, he made a point of greeting everyone in the front row with a warm, firm handshake and calling him or her by name. Maybe he was playing the quintessential politician, but he had a way of zeroing in on the individual. Short in stature with a smooth, ruddy complexion, bright blue eyes behind trademark horn-rimmed glasses and his ever-present bow tie, Simon entered the room quietly, yet, everyone was as aware of his presence as if he'd come in waving a banner.

Simon opened his speech by telling his audience that none of us could define leadership carefully, but we know it when we see it.

"When I talk to chambers of commerce, or groups like that, I tell them that there are three things you need to move ahead," Simon said. "I think this is true for individuals as well as communities. One is to work hard, two is to be creative and three is be willing to risk."

Simon said that to lead simply to get recognition would not give a person much satisfaction.

What really gives satisfaction, he said, is helping others. He cited an example of this by using an incident from a Special Olympics where nine young retarded people were racing in the 50-yard dash. A boy stumbled and fell and the other eight stopped to help him up and joined arms to walk to the finish line.

"I think we can learn a lesson," Simon said. "We should join arms and work together to build a better society."

Often during his speech, he used examples from his many years in government service to bring home a point. He said the lack of leadership in our country was leading us to a culture of pandering.

"I cannot imagine today an administration of either political party proposing a major program without taking a poll, and then if they find it's not popular, going ahead with it," Simon said. "And then I cannot imagine an opposition party not trying to take advantage of a very unpopular stand. We have become excessively partisan. Most problems are nuts and bolts problems that we ought to be facing together and not dividing ourselves along partisan lines. One of the things we're not doing in the nation as we should be is facing problems."

"We have problems here at home and we ought to be reaching out across the borders of race, ethnic background, religion, sexual orientation and whatever divides us and we have to work together. Leaders ought to do that," Simon said.

Before opening the remaining time for questions from the audience, Simon summed up his speech by urging volunteerism to build leadership skills.

"People who bring people together can change history," he said.

Parking woes at Tower Lake

■ BY LEAH HOLBROOK
STAFF REPORTER

University Housing facilities management is working on a way to create a clearer form of communication with the Tower Lake residents about parking lot reservations.

Tower Lake residents complained in August that they were inconvenienced by late warnings of parking lot renovations in lots 4C and 4D. The lots were to be renovated in the central island area on Aug. 13 at 7 a.m. Bob Vanzo, director of administrative services, said the miscommunication began with the contractor, Hurst-Rosche, not following the proper procedure of alerting the university for the need to close a lot.

Vanzo said the miscommunication with Hurst-Rosche was resolved two weeks prior to the date of the lot closing. Bob Legate, coordinator of university housing facilities management, said memos were placed on each resident's door on Aug. 7.

"The contractor will continue to install concrete curbing along the parking parameters on the 400 side," Legate said in the Aug. 7 memo. "In parking lots 4C and 4D, the contractor will need to barricade the center island areas in an effort to gain complete access for reworking of this area. Vehicles should not park in the center island part of lot 4C and 4D from August 7 until the parking lots are repaved."

However, Darla Coleman, a resident of Tower

Lake, said she never received a memo on her door.

"Memos on doors are not effective enough, because children can take them from the doors," Coleman said.

Legate said he thinks that a part of the residents agitation comes from the lack of work done on the lots on Aug. 13. Vanzo said that the contractor moved slow due to inclement weather conditions this summer and tenants assumed the work was canceled.

Gary Cook, a resident of Tower Lake, said he received a notice about one week prior to the lots closing. Cook also said that he received a phone call between 1 a.m. and 2 a.m. on Aug 13 from the campus police about the lots being closed at 7 a.m. Captain Frank Harrison, campus police, said flyers were put on cars and phone calls began at 3 p.m. on Aug. 12 to warn all residents to move cars.

Harrison said the calls continued until everyone was reached. Cook said he never received a phone call before 1 a.m. Cook said he felt the phone call was an inconvenience and that the miscommunication occurred between the contractor and the university.

Legate said further miscommunication occurs when the resident's of Tower Lake move barricades to remove their care from the lots, and then fail to restore the barricades so other residents will know the lots are closed.

America reads

■ BY LEAH HOLBROOK
STAFF REPORTER

Southern Illinois University (SIU) President, Ted Sanders, recently signed SIU as one of the first 10 educational institutions in the United States to participate in President Clinton's "America Reads" program.

After Congress increased the 1998 financial year Federal Work Study (FWS) Award, President Clinton proposed that nearly half of those funds be used to pay reading tutors in the "America Reads" program. Therefore, advancing the "America Reads" goal that every American child should be able to read on his or her own by the third grade.

"Today I'm happy to announce that 20 of our nation's leading college presidents, from San Francisco to Texas to Southern Illinois, are unleashing the energy and enthusiasm of their students to help every 8-year-old learn to read," Clinton said.

SIUE was allocated a $70,000 increase in FWS funds which will be used for the "America Reads" program. Director of Student financial Aid (SFA) at SIUE, Marian Smithson, said this is the first time she has seen such a big jump in the funds allocated for FWS. Assistant Director of SFA, Sally Mullen, said the "America Reads" program at SIUE will be able to support about 25 Students per academic year.

"The students can earn money to help pay tuition, gain work experience and provide a community service," Smithson said.

Interested students must be FWS eligible. Associate Dean of the School of Education, Don Baden said 12 students were accepted into the program last week and will begin training soon. Mullen said students will work 15 hours a week, and will be paid as regular student employees. All student tutors will be paid $6.00 an hour.

News from the administration

Chancellor David Werner has announced that he will not be continuing Nancy Belck's tradition of daily walks. He does, however, wish to continue the open communications that marked her tenure as chancellor. Werner will be hosting periodic brown bag lunches for up to ten faculty, staff, and students who wish to have the opportunity to raise questions or discuss issues. You may call the chancellor's office at 2475 to sign up for lunch. Those who have matters to bring to my attention that are not appropriate for that format may call for an individual appointment. Others may find e-mai (dwerner@siue.edu) or notes to be a preferable and quicker way to bring an issue to his attention.

Vice Chancellor for Administration Kenn Neher has announced that the civil defense sirens will be tested on Sept. 9 at 10 a.m. The civil defense system is designed to provide warning of an impending emergency, such as a tornado or national attack. Sirens can be expected to produce a long, wavering intermittent sound both inside and outside university buildings. The test will last approximately three minutes.

The purpose of this test is to ensure that the system is functional as well as to familiarize you with the sound of the sirens. Testing will be conducted in accordance with applicable state regulations. Questions may be directed to Jack Butler at extension 2999.

Rape and violence end now program

■ JASON TRIPLETT
NEWS REPORTER

The Rape And Violence End Now program of St Louis is approaching its twentieth year of reform for male abusers. The program focuses mainly on domestic violence and marital rape offenders who feel a sense of loss due to their abusive behavior. Mark Moloney, the Executive Director of the program feels the parameters for the program are definite.

"Our mission is to provide programs that challenge and teach men to be nonviolent, assume personal responsibility, and behave respectfully," Moloney said. However the program also covers such topics as: masculinity and gender, nonviolence planning, relationships, and parenting.

RAVEN originated in the St. Louis area in 1978. Fifty percent of RAVEN members are referred from the courts as a sentence. Other members have been given a mandate from their partners to either get help or get out. Moloney feels confident the program works.

"A third of our staff are former program members," Moloney said, "the dropout rate from our program has dropped to twenty-five percent." Along with RAVEN, Moloney said there are forty other organizations across the country dedicated to reforming abusive males. However, the rate across the nation of men who complete the program is at eight percent, with a one percent mark of those who actually stay nonviolent.

Moloney hopes the program can help to educate men on all aspects of rape and abuse. RAVEN is reaching out to young adults by giving informational presentations at high schools in the St. Louis area. Moloney recently spoke at St. Louis University on the topics of, power and control, coercion, and the "date rape" drug Rohypnol. He believes university students are an important audience, but he is targeting younger audiences focusing mainly on high schools.

RAVEN invites all people to go check out their services. They offer weekly classes and groups for men seeking change, and partners are welcome. Anyone wishing to volunteer must contact RAVEN at (314)645-2492. Or visit them at 7314 Manchester in St. Louis, Mo.

Promiscuity and disease

The dangers are real for college-age adults

■ DANIELLE BELTON
NEWS REPORTER

The spread of STDs (sexually transmitted diseases) on SIUE's campus is low, but still a threat to area students. Many cases possibly go unreported or unacknowledged by the carrier, and some students do not practice safe sex methods regularly.

"I think that they (students) just don't know the risks out there, until it happens to them; they think that nothing is going to happen to them," said a senior sorority member who requested that her name be withheld.

According to 3M Pharmaceuticals, which is a major part of the STD Market Public Awareness Program, only about one in 500 college students will become infected with HIV (the virus that causes AIDS) during their college years. Despite this low number, they still warn that risky sexual behavior will increase the chance of one contracting the AIDS virus. This behavior also increases the chances of contracting other STDs like vaginitis (the infection of a woman's vagina) and hepatitis B.

"The state mandates we do the test (for STDs) on students, though incidents are low here," SIUE Medical Director Dr. Lee Johnson said.

SIUE has a very low STD rate that has not increased very much over many years. Johnson cites that reasons for this low rate are quite possibly that many of the students here are from rural areas where there isn't much spread of disease due to small populations. According to Johnson, schools in urban areas, or urban areas in general, would have more problems with STDs than rural ones.

"We don't have a lot of repeaters. Very seldom do we have to treat someone more than once," SIUE Director of Health Services Claretha Bryant said.

Bryant, who is a registered nurse that's been with the university since 1982, believes that although our rate of STDs is "not at all high," students still face problems with the diseases.

"They (STDs) are low but it would depend on the crowd you're with," Bryant said.

Some students on campus agreed with this statement, also believing that alcohol and promiscuity played major roles in the spreading of these diseases.

"With all the promiscuity going on the campus they couldn't be aware of the dangers of STDs or they just don't care," SIUE senior, Brian Stemmons said. "They have the 'this can't happen to me' attitude."

Stemmons, a health education major to graduate in the winter, believes that many students aren't informed about these dangers and are reckless in their behavior. He feels he cannot completely condemn them because he has faults of his own.

"I like condoms and they are necessary, but do I use them?" Stemmons said; "yes, but not all the time."

He replied that the reason for this was being 'caught up in the moment.' Other students, who requested their names to be withheld, had similar reasons. Though all of them were aware of the dangers, most complained that they did not like wearing a condom, or that it was uncomfortable. Some even went as far as stating specific types, such as how ribbed condoms, "do nothing for them."

"I don't like using condoms," one female sorority member said, "No one likes using them, but you have to. Nobody uses a condom on oral sex no matter how much they (experts, doctors) say use it."

As for promiscuity, one student claimed that "he preyed on the weak." In other words, like many older male students, he pursued female freshman students due to their lack of experience with college life and the men at the this university. Others mentioned that many students were sleeping with the same person, not realizing that this person was promiscuous, thus, continuing the spread of diseases across campus.

"You know that they're not going to make any attempt to stop spreading the problem," SIUE Medical Director Lee Johnson said.

According to Johnson, who's been with SIUE for a year now and is SIUE's first Medical Director in several years, he had a male patient that had contracted genital warts from sex. After being told to tell all of his partners of his infection, he replied that he couldn't because that would ruin all his chances at "conquest."

To help combat these problems, Health Services offers such programs as their condom dispensing, free HIV screenings with the Madison County AIDS Awareness Program, and all other forms of STD testing. Health Services also has many helpful pamphlets and information on STDs, and will also answer any student's questions about them. They supply condoms and education for students that come in with these problems.

"We can do any test a student may be interested in," Bryant said.

As of the fiscal year 1996-97, there were 580 female pelvic exams done on this campus. In 278 of these cases the patient had some sort of infection, but of those, they were mostly yeast infections. Some 318 females were screened for VD (venereal disease). According to Johnson, most infections he treated were non-sexually related, such as yeast infections, but there were five cases of warts and two cases of gonorrhea documented. Some diseases like gonorrhea and HIV can be dormant for long periods of time before a carrier has any real symptoms, so many students could be carrying the disease and not realize it.

"(Students) think they're immortal and they think that nothing is going to happen to them," Johnson said.

STDs are diseases caused by germs and viruses and spread by sexual activity. Possibly through oral, anal, and vaginal sex. They are known for inhabiting warm, moist areas, such as the mouth, rectum, and the sex organs (the penis, vagina, vulva, and testes). Some of the most common STDs found on this campus are venereal warts, herpes, chlamydia, and gonorrhea. There are over 26 types of sexually transmitted diseases. Many of them are painful, most can be treated with antibiotics, and many are life threatening.

Though Johnson and Bryant agreed that SIUE does not have some of the same high rates of infection as some more urban colleges do, such as University of Southern California and the University of California at Los Angeles, SIUE students should still practice the safest sex possible and get tested if they have any doubts.

Health Services can supply treatment and medicine to treatable infections through the pharmacy, whether prescribed by a doctor here or outside of SIUE. They also encourage students to come in to be tested and receive this treatment. Bryant cautioned that diseases, such as hepatitis A and B, could be transmitted from a shared razor, toothbrush, or other contact, not just sexual contact. Other infections could also be avoided by using good hygiene.

Still, despite all this information some wonder if all the pamphlets and booklets will really touch students on campus.

"Everyone should have to take Health 201," Stemmons said, who believes that although information is available through Health Services, many students won't take advantage of it. "They have it (the information), but how many people will actually use it?"

Mass communications students win second place in national public relations contest

■ DANIELLE BELTON
NEWS REPORTER

Two SIUE students were runners-up in the NATPE Educational Foundation 1997 Student PSA Contest. The contest was a scholarship competition, with racism and religious tolerance as its themes.

Amber Zumalt and Ian Leith received $500 prizes as well as matching prize money for the university's Mass Communication department.

Both were students in SIUE professor, Patrick Murphy's, video production class. As an assignment, Murphy had all his students join in teams of two to produce a 30-second public service announcement on video. Eight videos were produced, and the students voted on which videos were the best. That video was then entered into the contest.

"It gave them an actual place where they would be able to send their work where it could be used," Murphy said.

The video Zumalt and Leith put together was described as extremely creative by Murphy. The award seemed to please both the department and the two students alike.

"A real feather in our caps," Murphy said.

SIMON

Simon was not without a sense of humor. While answering a question about political campaigning, he related a story of a man in Chicago who told Simon that he disagreed with him on every issue but that he trusted him and was going to vote for him.

Simon believes that people don't want pandering. The public wants its officials to be honest with them.

"It is my experience that if politicians stand up and say what they believe, people appreciate it," Simon said. "Even though they may be temporarily hostile at what you have to say."

After he finished taking questions, Simon politely and patiently posed for pictures and signed autographs while visiting easily with the people eager to talk to him.

Simon joined the faculty of SIUC in 1997, just weeks after retiring from the U. S. Senate. He and his wife, Jeanne, make their home in Makanda, IL., which is near the Carbondale campus. Simon is also the founder and director of the Public Policy Institute at the Carbondale campus and has plans to expand some of the programs to involve the Edwardsville campus.

Coleman and Cook said they were agitated because the lots were not even worked on the next day. Vanzo said the procedure for notification of closing a parking lot has been revised, and there should be no further miscommunications as long as the contractor complies. Vanzo and Legate held a meeting this week with the contractor to discuss duties, time line and the communication process.

Vanzo said he is working on creating a clear link of communication with the students and that a posting of lot closures are also listed on a web-site and through e-mail notices.

Harrison said no cars were towed from lots 4C and 4D on Aug. 13. Vanzo said only a few cars have been towed this summer during the parking lot renovations. SIUE attempts to notify all students of closed lots, and SIUE has paid for the towing of cars that were parked unintentionally in closed lots by students that could not be reached.

Legate said he is dedicated to creating a responsive team at the university housing facilities, and as part of that commitment new work orders are being created with surveys for the tenants to fill out when maintenance is provided to their homes. Legate said if residents have any questions about the procedures of the university housing facilities to call the office at 2070.

The tutoring will take place at Hawthorne Elementary and Lansdowne Community Center in East St. Louis. Smithson said the average age of the children being tutored will be from 6 to 12 years old. Tutors will work one on one or sometimes in a small group setting.

Training for the tutors will begin on September 8. Training is being provided by Steve Barrett, a doctoral student from the University of Missouri, Columbia. SIUE well provide transportation to all of the FWS "America Reads" tutors departing at 2:45 p.m. and returning at 6:00 p.m.

Baden said in addition to the FWS for the "America Reads" program some students may be eligible for "Americorp credit." If student tutors complete 900 hours of service in two years they may be eligible for an education award of $2,362. Also, Baden said participation in this program will look great

What an eventful weekend. Not only did we get to watch as America's lamest celebrities appeared on the umpteenth Jerry Lewis telethon, (I was hoping Jerry would get smashed this year in the middle of the night and drag out the corpse of Dean Martin for a duet) but the world lost an icon.

Sure, everyone's probably sick of the coverage, but hey, this is what you people thrive on, so it's going to be the top story for the next few months.

The thing everyone is waiting for is the pictures. I don't care how many rolls of film the French police confiscated, there are going to be some gruesome pictures available for the ghouls to gawk at.

I know I won't be the first to say it, but the whole thing reeks of conspiracy.

"I saw that Mel Gibson/Julia Roberts movie last week and thought it was kind of lame, now I'll have to go back for a second watch and look for clues.

The really scary thing is that someone famous and supposedly powerful can be wiped clean if certain people don't like the life she is leading.

People disappear and die everyday, who's to say that someone didn't get rid of the young Princess.

It's no wonder the "X-Files" is as popular as it is, people are biting their nails wondering what the powers that be are really capable of.

If there was evidence that something was rotten in the royal family, do you think the general public would hear about it?

No way, Buster Brown. I'm just going to start watching what I say and do, because I don't want to end up with one of the most watched funerals in history.

Talking to Jim Smith is a very relaxing occurrence. He speaks with a sugary Southern drawl, reminiscence of Billy Bob Thornton's "Carl" or that nice uncle who likes to build bird houses and always has peppermint candy in his pocket.

All those thoughts go away when Smith starts talking about his work. Bugging eyes, flatulence, crusty nipples and bodily functions. No, he's not an HMO physician, he's a comic book artist/animation/guru for the company called Spumco.

Smith along with his cohort John Krifalusi worked on the original version of "Ren and Stimpy," until they were asked to resign by Nickelodeon.

"I didn't want to leave, we were invited to leave," Smith said. "They ordered us to volunteer to leave. It was pretty traumatic. The whole place went into a major upheaval."

Smith said the first few years after "Ren and Stimpy" were used we were just trying to make new things happen. Spumco was the result.

The company has given life to the peacock on NBC and created a ground-breaking drawn/ computer/live action video for Bjork. They also produce a comic book for Dark Horse and a wacky line of toys.

They recently designed some creepily realistic Three Stooges dolls. Smith had a hard time deciding on his favorite Stooge, though.

"It's different every week. [I] always like Curly, then Larry started doing some really cool shit. Nowadays, I'm discovering Above: Jim Smith, one of the co-founders of Spumco (a comic book, animation, toy, and mayhem factory) is surrounded by a group of the company's characters.

Right: Jim Smith created an original sketch of his work for readers of the Alestle to enjoy.

After singing "The Monster Mash" over a thousand times, chances are Bobby "Boris" Pickett would be a little tired of the 1960s Halloween ditty, but he's not.

Of course, he has occupied himself with other things over the years like writing a play and appearing on television and film in movies like, well, "Monster Mash: The Movie."

Pickett gave himself the nickname "Boris" because of the Boris Karloff impersonation he does in the song. He will be performing the classic hit and signing autographs Thursday through Saturday at the Darkness Haunted Theme Park at the old Welsh Baby Carriage Factory.

Don't let dollar signs leave you blinded for a scam

■ By CHRISTOPHER LITTEKIN
STAFF REPORTER

Scholarship fraud is very serious business. Many companies, under the guise of "scholarship assistance," specialize in fleecing unwitting students into parting with their money. These scam agencies promise free money, but invariably fail to deliver. The advertising methods by which these scams operate are cleverly concocted, yet make false and/or misleading statements: that millions or billions of dollars in financial aid go unclaimed each year, and they can help you to your share, the promise of free financial aid, with a small fee ($10.00 - $400.00) paid for their assistance in locating scholarships and grants, with guarantees of success or your money back.

Some companies offer to sell directories which students can use to locate scholarships offered by various outside sources. For the most part, the students will be neither eligible nor qualified for these scholarships. Besides, this information is free, and any student can go to their financial aid office to see what is offered by way of scholarships.

One should take care to remember that, while there are many scholarship and financial aid services offered, there is no guarantee that the student will actually receive this aid. And most money back guarantees come with such strict conditions that the requirements for such guarantees are difficult, if not outright impossible, to meet.

These scam agencies have been keeping the Federal Trade Commission busy for years; and while eight of these companies have been sued in the past year, there are many more in existence. The usual modus operandi, once legal action has been taken, is to simply change the name of the company, relocate to another place of business, and continue in the same manner. This obviously makes it exceedingly difficult for federal agencies to stop them. Therefore, the best way to avoid being scammed is by being informed and educated on the subject of scholarship fraud.

There are a few signs one should look for when dealing with potential money assistance agencies.

1) "The scholarship is guaranteed or your money back." Nothing is guaranteed, including scholarships. Get refund policies in writing, before you pay anything.

2) "You won't find this info anywhere else." Check your school or library before you pay someone to do it for you. Chances are you'll be able to find what info you need for less money, or free.

3) "May we have your credit card or bank account number?" Never give out these numbers over the phone unless you're positive of the company's validity and integrity. You may be inadvertently setting yourself up for an unauthorized withdrawal.

4) "We'll do all the work for you." Don't you believe this. You must apply for all scholarships and grants on your own.

5) "This scholarship will cost some money." Don't pay those who claim to be holding scholarships or grants for you. Free money should not have to be paid for.

6) "You've been selected" or "You're a finalist" in a contest by some "International Foundation." Before you do anything else, make sure to confirm that the program is legitimate.

7) Remember the old maxim: "If it seems too good to be true, then it probably is." The purpose of business, and ultimately, education, is to profit. Ask yourself, "For whom does this profit?" If you stand to lose more than you will potentially gain, then perhaps you should reconsider your course of action.

"We really wanted to do a Shemp doll. We'd like to do a doll with Curly's body and replaceable heads for your favorite replacement Stooge," Smith said.

Smith was a comic book nut as a lad, and he grew up engrossed in classic Marvel comics, Jack Kirby-style.

"I would make up my own characters. I actually sold them at school one time. I would draw them on newsprint, fold them up and sell them for a nickel," Smith said. "You'd do anything to sell a comic. I can't remember the names of all of them [my characters] ... instead of the Fantastic Four, we'd have the Incredible Eight."

Spumco also has an impressive website at www.spumco.com, that features information about the company as well as their own serialized comic strip. There is a link from there to Smith's own site that has sketches by him.

Smith and Co. have been working together with Microsoft to create an on-line cartoon, which will be premiering soon. (Previews of the cartoon are now available at the Spumco site.)

In his spare time, not that there's much left, Smith works on music. He, along with some friends, created a band and eventually wrote the theme song to "Ren and Stimpy" called the "Dog Pound Hop" for which Smith still gets residuals.

"Every now and then they'll send me a check for 79 cents," Smith said.

There are many dream and wish projects for Smith and Spumco to think about. He would like to work on short cartoons for movie theatres as well as a feature length cartoon based on their "Ripping Friends" characters. For now, though, Smith is content keeping busy and making a name for himself and the company.

"I spend the whole day drawing and seeing how the website is coming along. Just drawing and laughing and puking our guts out," Smith said.

On a more positive note, Sallie Mae, the nation's leading source of financing for higher education, has opened a new website. This multi-media course, Financial Aid 101, can be accessed by logging on at www.salliemae.com. "The features of our newly enhanced website are geared directly to college students and others involved in the financial aid process," Jane Trevisan said. She is vice president of Sallie Mae. "Financial Aid 101 is one of the newest features designed to make the often complex subject of paying for college easier to understand."

The course contains five lessons on issues related to paying for college: 1) What is financial aid? 2) How do I qualify? 3) How do I apply? 4) What happens after I apply? and 5) What do I do if I need a loan?

In addition to being named one of the Internet's "Twenty-five Most Incredibly Useful Sites" by Yahoo! Internet Life, Sallie Mae's website has received a four-star rating by Magellan and a "Choice Site" citation from Starting Point.

Marion Smithson, director of SIUE Financial Aid Office, had this to say on the subject of scholarship fraud: "Once the student has been drawn into the scam, the university is powerless to help them. Their only possible recourse is through the company itself, or the State's Attorney General office. Last year, we even had a classified ad running in the Alestle which was a scam. I did all I could to have that ad pulled from the paper. And there was also a case last year where a certain unmentioned student got caught in one of these scams. She made the mistake of giving her bank account number, and later learned that they had been making unauthorized withdrawals from her account. There is so much financial aid information to be found on the web, it makes no sense to pay someone to look it up for you, anyway."

Diana's friends want her pal Elton John to sing at her funeral

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana's friends want her rock star pal Elton John to be invited to sing at her funeral. Buckingham Palace officials are due to say later Wednesday if he'll be asked to.

The Times of London reported Wednesday that some palace officials fear inviting John to sing might not set the right dignified tone for Saturday's funeral in London's Westminster Abbey.

But the paper reported growing pressure from friends of Diana, a keen rock fan, for John to be invited to sing. He is among the congregation that has been invited to attend the abbey service.

The paper said Diana's friends wanted a more modern element to be included in the traditional funeral format to incorporate the spirit of the 36-year-old princess.

The Rev. Donald Reeves, rector of the church of St. James's in Piccadilly near St. James's Palace where Diana's body lies awaiting the funeral, said he backed the calls for John to sing.

"I hope that Elton John and some of the very best pop musicians have the opportunity to join in," the Church of England rector said.

Last month, Diana was seen by millions on television with her arms round John, comforting him at the funeral of Gianni Versace, the Italian fashion designer slain by a gunman in Florida. Versace was a friend of both. John collaborated closely with Diana in her work for AIDS charities.

The Times said palace officials had been taking soundings on the issue from Diana's family and that of her ex-husband Prince Charles.

Italian opera star Luciano Pavarotti, another of Diana's friends, was quoted by The Daily Telegraph as saying he had been asked by the palace to sing at her funeral but had to turn the invitation down because he was too upset by her death.

The paper quoted 61-year-old Pavarotti, one of the world's top operatic tenors, as saying in Pesaro, eastern Italy, where he is on holiday at his farmhouse home: "It has distressed me so much that I can't even go to the funeral. I don't have the strength to take myself to London."

"I am here and I cry every day. You can imagine what it would be like if I were there. Buckingham Palace asked me to come, even to sing. But I will send a telegram of apology."

Pavarotti and Diana had known each other for more than 10 years. They first met when she attended an opera in London.

Joan Lunden says 'goodbye' to 'Good Morning America' Friday

NEW YORK (AP) — Joan Lunden has only a couple of mornings to go after 17 years co-anchoring "Good Morning America." That being the case, her viewers might ponder just what is the secret of her tenure unrivaled, as it is, in network morning TV.

I did. My conclusion: Her eyes. There's something about her eyes.

Upstaged they may be by Lunden's signature sunny smile. But when it isn't the time to smile, it's her eyes that say why, and maybe better than words or pictures could.

Joan Lunden's eyes, when you connect with them, can break your heart.

Which they did again this week as she co-anchored "GMA's" coverage after the death of Princess Diana. Lunden's eyes captured the sadness her viewers felt.

But when Lunden sat for an interview a couple of weeks ago to discuss her getting-nearer-by-the-moment departure, The Smile was a fixture on her face.

"I will admit to you that I took my appointment book and found Sept. 5 and wrote NO MORE WAKEUPS!, and I've been counting down," she said.

That unmerciful morning wake-up has come at 3:30 a.m. since before her three daughters were born and her eldest, Jamie, is 17 years old.

"They know no other way of life," Lunden said with a smile. "I think they're going to enjoy me not being tired all the time."

Earlier this year, NBC morning show "Today" said good day to Bryant Gumbel after 15 years in a seamless handover of his anchor duties to news reader Matt Lauer.

The transition of power became an opportunity for "Today" to celebrate its own success as the No. 1 morning show in the ratings. By contrast, ABC's "Good Morning America," which has trailed "Today" for almost two years, faces mostly uncertainty with the debut next Monday of Lunden's successor, Lisa McRee, beside longtime anchor Charles Gibson (even Gibson's future is uncertain).

Lunden allowed that she would have preferred her show be in the top spot when she left but insisted its difficulties hadn't hastened her departure.

"The show will have to find its place with viewers again," she said. "But every show has its ups and downs, and you can't necessarily pick and choose when to leave."

"I'm not leaving because the ratings are down, but because I wanted off that schedule. I'm leaving because it's time, maybe a little MORE than time. I've known for the last two years that I should probably move on.

"But when you've done something that's so successful for so long, when you have this incredible seat from which to view the world, and you finally come off of it to go do something else what is there that's bigger and better? Finding it has been a fear of mine, and has probably kept me from making a move for a while."

And she looked ahead to her final Friday, scheduled to be a special Joan Lunden retrospective show, she conceded, "It's going to be hard. I'm not good at hiding my emotions. If somebody's getting married, I cry even when I don't know them."

Lunden, who turns 47 in a couple of weeks, has about 18 months left on her contract with ABC, where she plans to produce several more of her "Behind Closed Doors" interview specials.

Beyond that, she will take her sweet time considering offers opportunities that run the gamut, she says, from a syndicated daytime talk show to a prime-time sitcom.

Rams' fans need a dose of reality

■ BY WAYNE FRAZER
SPORTS EDITOR

OK, settle down. The first meeting of the Rams Reality Check Support Group is now in session.

My name is Mike Mediocre, and I'll be helping you deal with the feelings you're all having now that the Rams are 1-0, and in first place in the NFC West.

I've already heard some of you talking before the meeting about how different the team is, and how exciting it is to have a good football team in town.

Let's put down our "Vermeil for President" signs and look closely at what we have in front of us.

The St. Louis Rams are indeed undefeated and in first place. This is after one week, people. Rome was not built in a day, you know.

Remember how good Steve Forbes looked early last year?

I read in a local paper that the Rams had taken everything the Saints had to offer in the first half, and stood their ground resiliently before coming back to win.

Let's analyze that, shall we?

First off, the Saints have the knockout power of Kristi Yamaguchi. Mike Ditka is a good coach, but he's saddled with bad players. Average as the Rams are, New Orleans just plain stinks.

Now, think about the first quarter of Sunday's game. The Saints whipped the Rams all over the field for 20 minutes, including 69 yards on the first two plays of the season. Oops.

This doesn't sound like a Super Bowl team, does it?

That's because it isn't.

St. Louis, you have every right to be proud of your Rams. They did a good job of overcoming opening day jitters and hanging in long enough for the Saints to self-destruct.

They showed a decent running game; Tony Banks looked solid, and Bud Carson's swarming defense took the game over in the second half.

Just keep in mind, there are 15 games left in the season, and unfortunately, we can't play New Orleans every week.

So keep your imaginations in check, and save those Super Bowl ticket requests for a few more weeks.

In the meantime, I think I overheard one of you say the Cardinals were still in the race?

Cougar hockey? You bet your ice!

■ BY WAYNE FRAZER
SPORTS EDITOR

Wanted: Hard skaters. Strong wrist shots. Quick gloved hands. Apply on the ice, and bring your stick.

In its second season, the SIUE Cougars Varsity Hockey Squad is on the hunt for more players and assistants to the program.

Cougars head coach and general manager, Bill Misiak, will lead the team into its first season of sanctioned play in the Illinois-Wisconsin Collegiate Hockey Association.

Although the season opener is just around the corner, Misiak said there is still room on the roster.

"There are players out there who still don't even know we exist," Misiak said. "I sat in the Goshen Lounge and talked to people who have been at this university five years and don't know about the hockey program."

Misiak and his team are out to change that.

The team will hold an informational meeting today at 4 p.m. in the Goshen Lounge in the University Center for players, and for those interesting in helping the program.

A tryout will follow from 4-5:30 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 8 at the East Alton Ice Arena.

As the team stands, Misiak said the talent level is Division II.

The Cougars receive no funding from the university, and players are not on scholarship. Coaches also cannot actively recruit.

This does not prevent Misiak from getting some of the best talent in the area.

A case in point is incoming freshman Mike Gerhling.

A standout for the league champion Edwardsville Tigers last season, Gerhling should move right into the lineup for SIUE.

Misiak said Gerhling will make the Cougars better immediately.

"He is the most significant of the talent this year," Misiak said. "He's a two-way player, a strong skater who plays both ends of the ice."

Having that local connection working means Misiak expects more of the youth in the area to show up on SIUE's doorstep in the near future.

"Local talent has come to the university specifically to play hockey," Misiak said. "There will be many more to come."

The hockey explosion in the area has made many more players available than in the past. Misiak said there are 56 high schools fielding teams in the immediate area of St. Louis.

He attributes the sudden rise of hockey's popularity to one thing: the NHL.

"It's going everywhere," Misiak said. "I mean, they're playing in Dallas, Carolina, Florida, Nashville. It's crazy."

The Cougars play a tough schedule this season, including games against such Midwest powerhouses as Eastern Michigan, Northwestern, Indiana and the University of Illinois.

Last season, the team's first, SIUE held its own against some of the biggest names in collegiate hockey, including a close 12-9 loss to the Fighting Illini in the program's first ever game.

Misiak said opposing coaches were surprised by the team.

"They couldn't believe how strong we were," Misiak said.

The team won all seven of its games outside of its division last season, and was in every game in the conference.

Misiak said the difference was conditioning.

"I didn't even have a team a month before that first game," he said. "We just didn't have the gas in the third period."

Misiak brings a wealth of experience to the bench for the Cougars.

A former assistant coach at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Misiak has also been a local youth coach, winning a state championship in Illinois a few years ago.

Misiak is also a USA Ice Hockey Official, the highest level of referee in the game.

Questions can be directed to Misiak at 692-2159.

Spikers start season on wrong foot

■ BY CHRISTY PERRY
SPORTS REPORTER

If they never see Michigan again, it will be too soon.

It was a long trip for SIUE head coach, Sandy Montgomery, and her troops, as the Cougars dropped all four of their games on the season-opening trip to the Hillsdale Tournament.

Montgomery said her team simply did not play up to its capability.

"If we would have played halfway to our potential, we would have won those matches," Montgomery said.

The Cougars, who went 23-16 last season in only the program's second year, faced Lake Superior State in the opener Saturday and fell in four games; 12-15, 10-15, 15-5, and 0-15.

Michelle Gilman racked up 17 kills but could not give SIUE the edge it needed.

Oakland University was the Cougars' second foe of the evening. SIUE dropped the match 7-15, 11-15, 15-11 and 2-15.

Junior Julie Litteken, had 10 kills and two service aces for the Cougars, but Oakland proved to be too much.

SIUE had its chance to turn the tide on Sunday. The Cougars squared off against St. Joseph's College, but lost a five-game match, 14-16, 15-13, 8-15, 15-10, and 13-15.

Gilman totaled 16 kills against the Panthers.

The tournament closed with the Cougars being swept by host school Hillsdale 3-15, 10-15 and 12-15.

Montgomery said there is plenty of room for improvement.

"Defense has normally been our strong suit," Montgomery said. "We normally block very well and dig the ball pretty well.

We didn't do that at all. We were out of sync and nothing was going our way."

Even in defeat, Montgomery said her team put out the effort.

"They did play hard," she said. "I was very happy with that, but we just couldn't get anything going."

SIUE will have a chance to change its luck when the team travels to Ft. Wayne, Indiana this weekend for more action.

'Revelation From God' stalls Gilbert contract talks

ASHBURN, Va. (AP) — It would seem a couple of losses would be just the thing holdout defensive tackle Sean Gilbert needs to gain leverage in talks with the Washington Redskins. His agent sees it the other way.

"We want them to be 7-0," agent Gus Sunseri said Tuesday. "If they are 7-0, they are thinking, 'We can make a run, but we can only do it if we get more solid on the defensive line.'"

Sunseri, no doubt, was putting the best possible spin on the Redskins' 24-10 victory at Carolina on Sunday night. It was good a news-bad news outing for the 'Skins defense: They gave up only one touchdown, but the Panthers rushed for 158 yards.

"Irrespective of the points scored, you can't give up that type of yardage, and they know that," Sunseri said.

"Regardless, there have been no talks between Sunseri and the Redskins since the game, and there's no sign the holdout will end anytime soon. In fact, Sunseri said a "revelation from God" was keeping his client from joining the team.

"It's over money, but it's not about money. It's a spiritual thing," Sunseri said. "Sean feels he's had a revelation from God that this should be the figure" in his new contract.

"Gilbert, who credits a religious conversion in 1994 for saving him from the wild lifestyle of his early pro years, has been demanding a deal worth $5 million per year, although Sunseri" said Gilbert "would sit down and consider" $4.5 million.

The Redskins have offered $3.6 million over six years. Both sides consider the other's demands untenable.

"They haven't negotiated, and neither have we," Sunseri said. "We will move when they move."

Redskins general manager Charley Casserly's response: "Our offer is a fair offer based on our thoughts on Sean Gilbert as a player."

Gilbert missed his first week's paycheck — a minimum of $175,117 by sitting out Sunday's game. Sunseri wouldn't say directly whether he would raise his contract demands to compensate for the lost salary, though he did say if Gilbert "sits out the whole year, he's not going to lose anything."

Gilbert was angered when the Redskins designated him their franchise player after the 1996 season, a move which kept him from testing the free agent market. The Redskins, in exchange, had to offer him a minimum of $2.8 million per year, the average call-in radio show's switchboard last week after a Sunseri interview was broadcast, and a letter to The Washington Post suggested Gilbert should stay home and "eat coal dust."

"It's really irrelevant what the masses think per se," Sunseri said. "Sean does care, but what he cares most is how he's judged by God."
